FOR

Promoting Christian Knowledge

In and about

The CITY of LONDON.

GENTLEMEN,

HE Sermon here put under your Protection, was preach'd November the 17th, 1712. at the Church of St. Alban Woodstreet, to the Common of Parish-Clerks, an ancient Body, A 2 and and still an inferiour Branch of the Clergy of the Establish'd Church of England, and who therefore, while they keep within the Bounds of their own Office, ought to be supported and encouraged by their Superiors. I could not but lay hold on fuch an Occasion, to recommend Psalmody, a great Part of the Business of Parisb-Clerks, and in which they are Guides to our worshipping Congregations; and what our Pare chial Clergy ought to promote, and to take particular Care of; that as Pfalmody is an important Part of Divine Publick Service. fo it may be perform'd in a pertinent, fe rious, reverent, and agreeable Manner Otherwise the Remisness of the Priest may make the Clerk, for want of Assistance and Favour, do his Office carelesly, and bring that facred Employment into Difesteem, some of our superiour Clergy, while they seldom or never read the Prayers of the Church in their own Persons, but leave them to their Curates, whose Salary is oft so mean and fcandalous, that Men of Worth wil not accept it, render the most heavenly and compleat Devotions in the Christian World, vile and contemptible to Atheift Schismaticks, and the undiscerning Part of the Common People.

When

When I preach'd to the Parish-Clerks, I told them particulary of their Duty, with that Plainness, Impartiality, and Authority, which becomes every lawful Ambassador of Jesus Christ: My Business is not to flatter, or let Men alone in their Miscarriages or Mifakes, I leave that to others. He who would have the Waters of the Sanctuary run clear, must endeavour to cleanse all the Channels through which they pass: The Body to whom I then preach'd, are too wife, and too honest to fancy themselves liable to no Errors: All Politick Bodies are obnoxious to Corruption; yet, it may be, their Errors may lie chiefly at the Door of their Masters, (I mean, not the Parish, but the Parish-Priests,) who, too often, think themselves unconcern'd in that Duty, which yet our Bleffed Master, and his Apostles, fanthify'd by their own Authentick Examples. I, for my part, value Pjalmody at the highest Rate, and therefore cannot but respect and esteem those Officers, whose proper Work it is to carry it on; and he who avenly aristian wipes off the Dust, concludes the Plate will atheists always appear the brighter. Atheists

What I had preach'd to these, I was desir'd to preach again at St. Giles's in the fields, on the Saturday following. A Reveverend Person, who had engag'd to preach there on that Day, having been taken with a fudden and very dangerous Sickness, to the no small Loss and Disappointment of the Congregation: I could not refuse those who propos'd it to me; but what I had faid to the Parish-Clerks, being wholly impertinent there, I added something, in lieu of that, with Respect to Psalmody in general, as more suitable to that numerous Congregation. What was faid at both Places, I here lay before you, not doubting but that, as you would gladly have the Abujes of Musick Reform'd, To you wou'd have Divine Musick, and Psalmody in particular, Promoted and Encouraged: Musick is a heavenly Art, and fure it's Pity it should ever be debauch'd to alienate any from the Service of their Maker.

As it's your Design to Promote Christian Knowledge in and about this great City we cannot doubt but that your pious En deavours here will have a good Influence upon the Country at a distance. The have drawn too many Corruptions from hence; Who knows but God may touc their Hearts at last, and make them ra ther Imitators of the Virtues, than the Vices of the City? That Psalmody is a D vine Ordinance, among others, and that reverently perform'd, is what too many, both here and elsewhere, are ignorant of: This Ignorance has expos'd both the Ordinance it self, and the Friends of it, to Contempt, even among some otherwise well-meaning Men; but so the whining, canting, Ex-tempore Man; the dull, impertinent, and affected Preacher; the slovenly and irreverent Dispenser of our Christian Sacraments, render Sacraments, Preaching, and Praying, despicable among the pretended Wits, and the undistinguishing Multitude.

There lies indeed something of an Objection against our Psalmody, viz. That the Version, sommonly us'd, is mean, full of antiquated Words and Phrases, &c. It's true, our Language is so much changed since the Days in which that Version was made, that even that of the excellent Sir Phil. Sidney, elaborate as it is, would appear yet more uncouth and disagreeable, than that of Sternhold and Hopkins, if it were to be us'd now: Yet none can question Sir Phil. Sidney's Learning, or Skill in Poetry, but one who wants both those Qualifications himself.

That a New and better Version should be substituted in the Room of the Old, is what every good Man would wish, and that Uniformity might be kept up in Singing of Pfalms, as well as in other Parts of Divine Worship; for it looks odly that the Sons of Harmony should be the Fathers of Discord in our publick Service. The providing of fuch, belongs only to a National Synod, or Convocation: The Old Version was allow'd of by Edward VI. when the Book of Common Prayer was first publish'd. I have some where feen a Form of Thanksgiving, on some extraordinary Occasion, in Queen Elizabeth's Days, it may be for the Victory in 88, in which two Stanza's of the Old Version are printed at length, as to be fung by the whole Congregation: And I have by me a Pfalm Book of the Year 1582, with that Queen's Arms on the Back of the Title-Page, and printed, Cum Privilegio Regia Majestatis; and even Dr. Watson intimates, that the Convocation in 61 thought fit to give a tacit Allowance to the Use of it, which, we may suppose, they did rather for the sake of Psalmody, than out of any Fondness of that superannuated Version. But these Circumstances add Weight to that Authority, by which they were us'd; and fuch a complicated Authority proposing a New Version, made and examin'd by Learned Men, skilld in the Original Language, in Poetry, and in Musick, or a thorough Correction of the Old, would, g of would, doubtless, be thankfully receiv'd by all the Lovers of Psalmody; and I make no doubt but, if that which letteth were taken away, our present, or the next Convocation, upon your Intercession, Gentlemen, would, in due Time, take Care of that Matter.

As you are GENTLEMEN of great Reputation, and engag'd in an excellent Design, your personal Joining in this sacred Duty, would have a confiderable Influence upon your own Parochial Assemblies: And the Improvement of Christian Knowledge must certainly be the Improvement of Christian Piety and Devotion; and Psalmody would appear like it felf, a Piece of that heavenly Devotion, if those who kneel at Prayers, where conveniently they can, and fand at the Reading Psalms, which every humble Christian, unless providentially disabled, would be asham'd not to do: If fuch Persons would but pay so much Honour to God, and so much Respect to a divine Institution, as to stand too, when the Congregation are singing aloud the Praises of their Maker; Heathens would never believe we were in an Act of Divine Worship, should they see us in the lazy sitting Pofure, when we pretended to it. The Jews would fcorn us, and the Primitive Christians ans would scarce take us for serious Professors of the same Faith, and Worship. pers of the same Jesus with them, were they to look down upon us in that irreve. rent Posture. Our Choristers stand up in Cathedrals, when they fing the Anthem, and fo does every one there prefent, who has either Devotion or good Manners: Those who fing before Princes and great Men, on folemn Occasions, do the same; and he who should fit at an Anthem in the Royal Chappel, especially the QUEEN being present, would be soon turned out of that facred Place; and shall not we, when we sing Praises to Him, who is King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, in his Own House, where He himself is in the midst of every Two or Three, who are lawfully gathered together in his Name; and where holy Angels are always observing both our Behaviour and Expressions; Shall not we, in such a Presence, express more awful Apprehensions of his infinite Majesty, than of that of any mortal Prince or Potentate? Reason and good Breeding teach us Humility and Reverence on fuch Occasions; but I never heard that Sitting was a Posture, which express'd either of those heavenly Graces.

But I conclude that the greatest Numher of those who do otherwise, have not thought much upon this Matter; And those who should have been their Monitors, have been as thoughtless as themselves; by which Means they may indeed be excus'd Tanto, but not à Toto. I have often been much edify'd, when I have feen the Congregation of the late Bishop of St. Asaph, in St. Peter's Cornhil, all unanimously fanding up upon the Calling of the Pfalm: That great Man's Instruction and Example brought his People, without much Difficulty, to that decent Posture; and the Musick it self carry'd an Air of more divine Grandeur with it, when so performed, than it would otherwise have done: And, no doubt, but if all others, who have the Care of Souls, would tread in the Steps of that Learned Man, every worshipping Congregation of the Church of England would, in that Point, be either Reform'd, or Inexcusable. Here I, and every Lover of Psalmody, beg your Assistance, the Asfistance of all the Reverend Clergy of our Church, and of all fuch as fincerely defire, that every Thing in our Publick Afsemblies may be done Decently, in good Order, and to Edification. To this End the following Discourse was first Preach'd, and

Moreover, Hezekiah the King, and the Princes, commanded the Levites to sing Praises unto the Lord, with the Words of David, and of Asaph the Seer; and they sang Praises with Gladness, and they bowed their Heads and worshipped.

HE Words are Part of that History. which leads us to the Revival of the Feast of the Passover, which seems to have been intermitted in Israel now for several Years. Hezekiah, the pious Son of a wicked Father, being come to the Throne of Judah, as the best Mean of procuring a Bleffing on his Government, begins it with the Restauration of Religion. Ahaz, his Father, had filled Jerusalem with Idols, and, in Defiance of the true God, had shut up the Gates of his. Temple; had, in a Manner, vacated the Offices of the Priests and Levites; and, by a long Difuse of it, had defiled that glorious House, which Salomon had built to the Name of God, with Filthiness and Ruines. But so soon as Hezckish reign'd, he restored the Priests, order'd the Levites to fanctify themselves; and then, as he had open'd and repair'd the Gates, he commanded them to cleanse the Body of the Temple. This done, He appoints the Priests to prepare, and kill, and offer the usual Sacrifice to God. He renews the solemn Service and Worship of God there, and then, fo foon as the Time would permit, proclaims the Palfover. Of all this, we have a just Account in this, and the following Chapter.

Among other Circumstances relating to the Renewal of this sacred Worship, we are told, that - When the Burnt-Offering, and the Sin-Offering were made for all Israel; then Hezekiah the King, set the Levites in the House of the Lord, with Cymbals, Psalteries, and with Harps: And the Levites stood up with the Instruments of David, and the Priests with the Trumpets. And Hezekiah commanded to offer the Burnt-Offering upon the Altar: and when the Burnt-Offering began, the Song of the Lord began also with Trumpets, and with the Instruments ordained by David King of Israel. And all the Congregation wor-Shipped, and the Singers Sang, and the Trumpets founded: and all this conninued until the Burnt-Offering was finished. By all which we see, how great an Interest Divine Musick had, at this Time, in the Celebration of God's publick and folemn Service. And when all this Solemnity was over, then the King, and all such as were present with him, bowed themselves, and worshipped. And moreover, as in the Text, Hezekiah the King, and the Princes, commanded the Levites to fing Praifes unto the Lord, with the Words of David, and of Alaph the Seer: and they sang Praises with Gladness, and they bow'd their Heads and worshipped. Now the Words of this Text intimate to us, not only the present Action of the King, the Priests, and the People, upon this extraordinary Occasion, but their whole Religious Constitution, or that fettled Rule, according to which the Service of God ought at all Times to have been performed. In which too, we see how much Contern the King, and his Princes, or his Nobility, both Ecclefiastical and Civil, and his Ministers of State, had in the Restauration and Settlement of God's publick Worship: How careful they were that it should be decently perform'd, and how ready all those, who were to minister a bout bout the Affairs of Religion, were to do their Duties. In discoursing upon which Matters, we may consider,

I. How great a Share singing of Psalms, and Hymns, and spiritual Hymns, had in the Worship of God among the Jews, and in the Patriarchal Church before them.

II. Who, in the particular Jewish Church, were the principal Managers of this Part of Divine Worship.

IV. How far the whole is applicable to that Divine Worship, now offered to God in the Christian Church.

I. We are to consider, How great a Share singing of Psalms, Hymns, and spiritual Sonos, had in the publick solemn Worship and Service of God among the lews, and in the Patriarchal Church before them. I mention the Publick Service of God among the Jews more particularly; because we have the fullest Account of that, in the Book of God: But I cannot speak of that, without looking back to an earlier Original, or to the first Patterns of fuch folemn Worship, which are recorded there, either expresly, or by Intimation. Tis not a meer poetical Fancy, but it is a ferious Truth, that, "All we know at present of "the bleffed Angels, or of the Souls of just "Men made perfect, and what their Employ-" ment is, and ever shall be, is only that they " fing incessant Praises to their Maker and Re-" deemer, and live in perpetual Love and Cha-"rity with one another." This Employment of the holy Angels is of the first Antiquity, when, upon God's laying the Foundations of the B 2 Earth.

Earth, the Morning Stars Sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for Joy, Job XXXVIII. 7. as God himself expresses it. And this was not for that Time only, but the Prophet Isaiah in his Vision, Isa. VI. 3. saw them still engaged in the fame Work, where the glorious Seraphim -Cry'd, or sung aloud to one another, in the Presence of their Lord, - Holy, Holy, Holy, is the Lord of Hosts, the whole Earth is filled with his Glory. And that this will be the Business of all Eternally happy Spirits, is fairly shadowed out to us by St. John, Revel. IV. 8, 10. where, under the Representation of Four Beafts, the Four Evanrelists; and under that of Four and Twenty Elders, the Prophets of the old Testament, are describ'd doing Honour to Him who sat upon the Throne; the Beasts - Saying, or singing incessantly Day and Night, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, who was, and is, and is to come. And the Four and Twenty Elders finging as a Chorus to them, - Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive Glory, and Honour, and Power; for Thou hast created all Things, and for thy Pleasure they are, and were created. Now all this Musick was facred; all these Expressions of Joy and Thanksgiving were highly due to Him, to whom they were paid: And fince finging Hymns of Praise to God, is of so unquestionable Antiquity, it's a plain Proof that God looks upon the Capacity of finging Praise to himself, as a Gift of his own, most sensible to all the rational World; and that neither Men nor Angels can ever praise their Maker in a more acceptable Manner, than when each, in their Way, make a joyful Noise unto God; when they sing to the Honour of his Name, and make his Praise to be glo-Tious. We cannot with any Reason doubt but that? as God appointed, and their own original Na ture directed the Hosts of blessed Angels to fing unceasing Praises to himself, on Account of both his Goodness and his Power in creating them at first, and then preserving them from the Rebellion of their Brethren; and upon Account of all his wondrous Acts of fovereign Power, in forming the Universe out of nothing, and protecting it when formed in all its Parts; we cannot doubt after this, but that, so soon as he had made Man, he laid the fame Duty upon him, and inspir'd him with Abilities to perform it: And he who had fo extensive a Government conferr'd upon him at the very first, and had Wifdom enough given him to manage it, (for God never puts Power into the Hands of Fools, but with a Design to punish them, or their Subjects) when he looked about him, and law the Beauties of the New-made World, a thousand Effects of immense Power and Goodness, and had no Notion of Evil, which might disturb or cloud his Thoughts, when he had this admirable Prospect, he could not but break out into Songs of Praise, and the loudest Thankfgivings to his Maker. And could we but believe that the Observation of the Sabbath was ordained in Paradife, as some imagine, the Inscription put in the Head of the Ninety second Psalm, by the Chaldee Paraphrast, viz. A Isalm sung by the first Man in Paradise, at the pening of the Sabbath, would be; a very clear Demonstration, in what Manner, that great Parent of Mankind, began his Course of Life. And, since every Day he spent in that delight-Place, furnished him with new Matter of Praise and Admiration; his Soul, which was then all innocent, holy, and heavenly, would express it self agreeably: Nor was the Business of his Government so great, nor dressing the Garden of God so laborious, but that, in the midst of all his Employments, he might — Give Thanks unto the Lord, and sing Praises unto the Name of the most High, Pfalm XCII. 1.

And though the Confequences of his Fall brought a dismal Damp upon his Spirits, yet that Mercy, by which God exempted him from the Stroke of immediate Death, and gave him that comfortable Promise, That the Seed of the Woman should break the Serpent's Head; the full Meaning and Import of which Promise, Adam, whatever the Socinians, and their Followers, fuggest to the contrary, perfectly understood, That Mercy afforded him again Matter of perpetual Praise, and never-ceasing Thankfulness and Adorations. I don't indeed remember, that Scripture any where tells us exprelly of any one of the Antediluvian Patriarchs, or of their immediate Successors, that they prais'd God, by sing-ing to his Honour, tho' we may suppose they did, upon very good Grounds, as may appear anon: But the Jews generally thought they did; and fince we find the Heathens, who had little Knowledge of divine Matters, but what was Traditional; and who mostly followed the Examples of their Predecessors, always accompanied their Sacrifices with Hymns, in Honour of their Gods; Whence their Priests were ge nerally Poets; and Poets, and the Writers of fuel Hymns, were their principal Divines; fine Heathens acted thus, we may presume, that Enoch, Noah, Melchisedec, Abraham, Isaac, 94 cob, and 70b, used the same Way of celebrat ing the Name of the one true God. And this Practic

Practice feems to have been usual, in that the Israelites fell upon it so immediately after the Drowning of Pharaoh, and his Aryptians, and after themselves had passed safely through the Red Sea; - Then Sang Moses, and the Children of Israel, says the Text, this Song unto the Lord, and Spake it, Saying, - I will sing unto the Lord, for he bath triumphed gloriously; the Horse and his Rider bath he thrown into the Sea! The Lord is my Strength, and my Song; and he is become my Salvation: He is my God, and I will prepare him an Habitation; my Father's God, and I will exalt him, Exod. XV. 1, 2. Where, by the very Expressions of the holy Penman, it's evident, that Singing was the most solemn publick Way of thanking God for his Bleffings: And that other Nations making every one their false Gods the Subjects of their Songs; Israel, in Acknowledgment of him who was their God, and the God of their Fathers, would make his Name, and his Goodness their Song, in Oppolition to the false Devotion of the Heathens. So again, when God brought his People in the Wilderness to the Well of Beer, which had been stopped thro' long Neglect before, but was to be opened now again, for the Use of the Israelites. — Then Israel sang this Song; — Spring up, O Well, Sing ye unto it! The Princes digged the Well: The Nobles of the People digged it, by the Direction of the Langiver, with their Staves, Numb. XXV. 17, 18. And that ic might at once appear a Custom of the Gentiles, and such an one as Israel could not be without; they could not forbear finging to their Golden Calf; and Moses suspected what they had been about, when, upon Joshua's telling him, on Account of that extraordinary Noise they heard from B 4 thence.

thence, - There was a Noise of War in the Camp. Moles, who understood the Matter better, reply'd, -- It is not the Voice of them who hout for the Mastery, neither is it the Voice of such as cry out for being overcome; but the Noise of those who fing, do I hear, Exod. XXXII. 18. Moses knew that fuch Singing imply'd some particular Act of Divine Worship, such as us'd to be at the Institution of a Religious Feast, and such as, at other Times, they themselves us'd to the Honour of their own God. To shew at once both the Excellence and Viefulness of so heavenly a Practice. When his own Death drew near, Moses taught Israel both their pass'd Miscarriages, and their future Duties, in that unparallel'd Song which we have at length, Deut. XXXI. And of the same Nature we have that fung by Deborah and Barak, as a Thanksgiving to God for the Deliverance of Israel, by their Hands, from the cruel Tyranny of Jabin and Sifera, Judges V.

Whether there were any Levites appointed particularly for carrying on the Work of finging Psalms, or Hymns in the solemn Service of the Ack and Tabernacle, during Ifrael's Wandrings in the Wilderness, or while the Tabernacle was in Shilb, the Scriptures have not expresly determined, tho' that is very probable too. But fo foon as ever David had but design'd to build a more magnificent House to the Name of God, he prefently appointed confiderable Numbers of that confecrated Tribe to fo holy a Work; for whatever might appear suitable to the State of a Church not yet throughly fettled, as indeed that of Ifrael was not, till their Temple was raifed, as appeas by God's permitting the very Prophets themselves, such as Samuel; nay, p.

nay, and David too, and Salomon afterwards, to facrifice in High Places, and vouchsafing them his Visions, and his Answers there; which Practice was wholly condemned as foon as ever the Temple was built, dedicated, and furnished with all Things necessary for Divine Worhip: Whatever was agreeable to the State of the Jewish Church before, yet when that Settlement was perfectly made, the Church being then in a kind of triumphant State, all the Demonstrations of Cheerfulness and Gratitude were to be made to that God, who had brought them out of a State of Pupilage, and cloath'd his Israel with Honour, and had made Jerusalem the loy of the whole Earth. Then the proper Introite into that glorious House at all Times was, O come, let us sing unto the Lord! Let us beartily rejoice in the Strength of our Salvation! Let us come before his Prefence with Thanksgiving, and shew our selves glad in him with Psalms. And then let us worship, and fall down, and kneel before the Lord our Maker, Ffal. XCV. 1, 2,6.

And now we find Singing of Psalms and Hymns to God, incorporated into the Temple Service, and look'd upon as so necessary a Part of it, that a great Number of the Levites were employed in it; that their particular Courses were appointed, and a peculiar Portion allotted them for their comfortable, nay, and honourable Subsistence. Psalms and Hymns were compos'd for their continual Use, by inspir'd Men; such as David, who from thence, as well as from his admirable Performance, was call'd, — The sweet Psalmist of Israel, — and Asaph, and Heman, and Ethan, and Jeduthun, and others: And almost the whole Book of Psalms is a Collection of such Songs of Praise, calling every where up-

It was in this Way of Hymns or Anthems, that David prais'd God always, and more particularly, in the Day when the Lord had delivered him from the Hands of all his Enemies, and from the Hand of Saul, Plal. XVIII. In this Manner he deplored the Greatness of his Sin, in the Matter of Urijah, Plal. LI. In this Manner Jeboshaphat glorified God, for the Deliverance of himself, and his People, from the invading Moabites, Ammonites, 'and their Confederates, 2 Chron. XX. 26. And thus Hezekiah, when God had given him Health, with an additional Grant of Fifteen Years to his Life, express'd his Gratitude to him in a Pfalm, Isa. XXXVIII. 9. And so, in mournful Streins, the Prophet Jeremiah lamented over the Ruines of Ferusalem, and the dreadful Desolations of his dear Native Country, Lamental. And the Prophet Habbakkuk, Habbak. III. is the last of this harmonious Company, whose Songs are recorded in the Old Testament. Now the Book of Psalms is so compleat a Treasury of Confessions, Intercessions, Deprecations, Prayers, Praises, Thanksgivings, and whatever is expected in the most devout and religious Worship, that, in all probability, and, according to the Optnion of the fews themselves, there were very few Prayers but those, made use of in the Publick Service, either of the Synagogue, or the Temple: In finging of Pfalms they spent their Nights, as well as Days; - Behold, blefs, of praise

That this Singing Pfalms all Night, was the Practice of the Essenes, a Sect among the Jews, appears by that admirable Description Philo gives of them, in his Difcourse of the Contemplative Life; That they, and the Generality of the Jews, did so on their Feflivals, and did well in fo doing, is evident from the Practice of our Saviour, who, after his last Supper, Sung a Hymn with his Disciples, before he went out with them to the Mount of Olives, Matth. XXVI. 30. And fo much may ferve for the first Thing propos'd to our Consideration, viz. What Share singing of Hymns had in the Patriarchal and Jewish publick Worship.

II. We are to consider, Who were the chief Managers and Performers in this Part of publick Divine Worship. And here, to shew in what Veneration God would have this Ordinance to be among his People; he, by his Word to his Prophets, confecrated a considerable Number of his own Tribe, the Tribe of Levi, to this heavenly Work: He instituted this, as a Mean of Union between Angels and Men, the Carnal and the Spiritual, the Militant and the Triumphant Church, that they might praise the Lord together, and publish his unbounded Goodness and Glory through the World. And fince Men were to be join'd in Confort with Angels; as Moses compos'd Hymns for the Use of the Israelites,

And the Daughter of Jephshah, that faithful Judge and Captain of God's People, led up a Company of Virgins, to meet her victorious Father, in the Head of his Troops, singing with inftrumental Musick too, and dancing to the Honour of that God, who had happily taught her Father's Hands to war, and his Fingers to fight. But when David the King became a Nursing Father to the Church of Irael, then he himself was the great Master of the Chorus, till fuch Time as he had regulated those Matters more exactly, as when he and his People brought up the Ark of God from Kirjeath Jearim, I Chron. XIII. 8. And again, when he brought it up from the House of Obed Edom, and fix'd it in Zion, 2 Chron. XV. 17. Nor was ever any Age bleffed with more compleat Masters of Musick, than that which was made happy by the Government of David and Salomon.

To shew that inspir'd Prince's great Regard to this Divine Musick, (for with that perverted by vain Men to vainer Purposes, neither Devid nor we have any Thing to do) and his Care of the performing of it, we find, He divided them to the Number of Two Hundred and Fourscore and Eight, all Masters of Song, and fit to lead and instruct others, into Twenty Four Courses; each Course to officiate according to their Lots, in the same Manner as the Friests themselves were order'd: And to add yet to the Honour of their Character, the Priests them-

HI. We must consider, in what Manner, and by what Rules, these divine Musicians performed their Duties: And here we find that they were of fuch Eminency, that the Kings of Ifrael and Judah thought fit themselves to be their Law givers and Directors, though not without the ad ditional Authority and Affistance of the High Priest; for the High Priest's Judgment, in al Cases, whether Civil or Ecclesiastical, was of a great Weight as that of the Sovereign himself and that by God's own Appointment; tho' tha Co-ordinacy in Judgment did not make the High-Priest co-ordinate with him in the Sove reignty: So that tho' the Prince could not va cate the publick Determinations of the High-Prief vet he might lawfully treat him as a Subject and either banish him, or put him to Death, he were a State Criminal. Neither did the Princes of the House of David disdain to consu with their Seers, Men favoured with divine Infa ration, and a kind of Houshold Chaplains to the Princes, or their private Confessors, to who the greatest Monarchs laid open their spiritu Conditions, and on whose Counsel in spiritu Matters they generally depended; whence Ga and Nathan, and Iddo, and others, were partic larly consulted in settling the singing Levites in the Order, in which David, and Jehoshaphat, a n the

The one a string'd, the other wind Instrument, each the Principal in its kind; and from which, and with a Design of imitating the humane Voice the more easily, all other Instruments have taken their Original. Now, though Cain himself was a wicked Wretch, a cruel and unnatural Murderer of his innocent Brother, and that because his Brother's Works were good, and his own were evil, John III. 12. yet it follows not that Cain's Posterity should all be as wicked as their Father. Adam was still living, and to be fire so exemplary a Penitent, that all such of his Descendants as lived within reach of him, and who had observed that Misery, which cursed Cain had brought upon his own Head, could not but have some Desires to reconcile themselves to their Maker. Sin and Misery encreasing every Subject Day, had made many fad Hearts, and languishing d the Spirits, which Adam, not so much deprived of his consuminal Sagacity, as his unhappy Successors endeance Inspection of to the Heaven, and the concurring Influence of the Heaven, and the concurring Influence of the Holy Spirit, he stirred up this Jubal to frame spiritual such Instruments of Musick, by the Concert of spiritual which, with their natural Voices, they might dince such a spirits of such as mourned under the Burthen are sinthest from an and might render them more cheerful that, a the Service of their God. the noblest Instruments of all, which, he having such Instructors, was no Wonder at all: The following Ages, till such Men as Moses, and David, and his Contemporaries, were reinspir'd, as Jubal had been, had declined very much in their musical Skill; which made David set himself, not only to revive the Art, but to invent more Instruments, as Helps to the Voice, and which might render Divine Harmony yet more grateful to curious Ears, and might affect the Passions several Ways, and give them a sweet, and every way charming Employment, in Meditations hea-

These Instruments, however aped or abused afterwards, were design'd originally only for praising God, and cheering the Hearts of otherwise drooping They were employ'd altogether in the Worship of the Supreme Being; and were so far from dipleasing him, that his Prophets made it their great Business to promote Psalmody: They found the wonderful Effects of that Angelick Melody; how it compos'd the Mind, and made it fit to receive Divine Impressions. So when David play'd on his Harp, and fung to it, pro bably one of his own Pfalms, the evil Spirit de parted from Saul, 1 Sam. XVIII. 25. and all the Tumults of his fermenting Spirits were, for that Time, happily allay'd; fo when the Sight of Je horam, that idolatrous King of Ifrael, in th Company of Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, and the King of Edom, their Confederate, had extreme ly ruffled Elijah's Spirit, he call'd presently to a Musician, and, when he play'd, the Prophet Mind resettled, and then the Hand of the Lord can upon him, 2 Kings III. 15. before the Law was given; and it was not the Fancy of one Man only to use Instrumental Musick in God's Worship, but - Hezekiah set the Levites in the House of the Lord with Cymbals, with Psalteries, and with Harps, according to the Commandment of David, of Gad the King's Seer, and Nathan the Prophet; for so was the Commandment of God by his Prophets, 2 Chron. XXIX. 25. And the Children of Israel kept the Feast of the Passover at Jerusalem, with great Gladness, and with great Acceptance from God; and the Levites and the Triefts prais'd the Lord Day by Day, singing with loud Instruments unto the Lord, 2 Chron. XXX.21. Thus Hezekiah, that excellent Monarch, and the Princes, the first and chief of which was the High-Priest, commanded the Priests and Levites to do; and, that there might be no Ground of Suspicion, that this Practice was to expire with the Law of Moses, St. John, Revel. XIV. 2, 3. has represented the Church triumphant in Heaven praising God, so as Their Voices were like the Voice of many Waters, and the Voice of a great Thunder; and he heard the Voice of Harpers harping with their Harps, and they sang as it were a New-Song, and no Man could learn that Song, but the Hundred Fourty Four Thousand, a glorious Chorus indeed, who were redeemed from the Earth.

With these Instruments then the singing Levites, and the Priests sang Praises to the Lord with Gladness, and when they did so, they bow'd their Heads, and worshipped; they sang to God with Fear and Reverence indeed; they did not set and praise God, as the uninstructed, or indevout Crew do now a-days; but we find them, and all humble Worshippers of the Divine Majesty, always standing up; whether they were Kings, or Princes, or Priests, or Levites, they always stood

And though some Greek Heathens might worship the Works of their own Hands sitting, the great, the true, the holy God, merits and expects more Reverence at our Hands. And fince those Psalms and Hymns made use of in the Temple, and in the Church, confift of Prayers, and Supplications, and Intercessions, and Confessions, all intermingled with their Praises, what devout or humble Soul can presume to pray to God for Mercies, to confess his Sins to him, to intercede with him, or to give him Thanks for Bleffings bestowed upon himself, or others, in such a rude and unmannerly Fosture, as fets him upon the Level with his Maker? Or who, expecting to be heard when he prays, would not express the Desires of his Heart by the Gesture of his Body and kneel, or bow, or ftand in the Presence and in the Praises of his God? Ignorance may be fome Excuse in the Case, but those who know their Duty, can never be happy but in doing if

IV. We come now in the last Place to consider How far what has been said is applicable to the Divine Worship which we offer to God in the Christian Church. ship, and what bleffed Saints and Angels are always employ'd in in Heaven, that can never be vacated by that Religion, which was instituted by him, who best knew what would please his and our Father; and who himself once bore a part in singing Hymns to him, which he would never have done, when his Soul began to be exceeding forrowful even unto Death, if the same Exercise had not been always comfortable to pious Souls, and decent and acceptable in all solemn Approaches to God. The God of Adam, Sheth, and Noah; the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Facob; the God of Ifrael according to the Flesh, and the God of Ifrael according to the Spirit, was One and the same God, the same supreme Being; and what was pleasing to him before the Law, and under the Law, could never be displeasing to him under the Gospel. And since a Chorus of joyful Angels welcomed the Nativity of the bleffed Jesus, with heavenly Harmony, and with as heavenly Words; - Glory be to God on High, on Earth Peace, good Will toward Men, Luke II. 14. Since the bleffed Virgin celebrated the Goodness of God to her, in making her the Mother of her Lord; Zecharias, that facred Honour conferr'd upon his Son, in his being made the Prophet of the Highest, and the Person sent to prepare his Way before him; and Simeon, when he had the glorious Infant in his Arms, as having with his own Eyes scen God's Salvation, all in Songs of Praise and Thanksgiving; fince these Things were so, Who can imagine, that either Vocal or Instrumental Musick mould ever be banished out of Christian Assemblies?

We

We do not find any Command either in the Gospels or Apostolical Epistles, that Christian Congregations (hould worship God by singing Fsalms; but we find the Disciples joining with their Master in One; and St. Paul, reproving some Disorders in the Corinthian Worshipping-Assemblies, speaks of _ Every one having a Psalm, I Cor. XIV. 26. i. e. either having compos'd fome pious Hymn for publick Use, which they offer'd unfeafonably; or, being as Clerks in the Congrega-tion, ready, out of Time, to lead that Tune which the rest were to follow; in exercising either of which Faculties, he required that they should act more orderly, and to Edification: And the Apostle declares that, on such Occasions, - He would fing with the Spirit, i. e. according to the immediate Dictates of the Spirit, who then frequently inspired those Guides of the Church; - And I will fing with the Understanding also, and so prove effectually that - The Spirit of the true Prophet is always Subject to that Prophet. It was one Reason among others, why fome Learned Men have fancy'd Philo's Therapeutæ, or Essenes, were really Christians, because they had their nocturnal Meetings for singing of Praises to God, as the Christians had; and that because in Times of Persecution they could not meet for that Purpose in the Day-time, without exposing themselves needlesly to their cruel Enemies. But their singing Psalms was so stated a Piece of their Divine Service, that the Heathens could not but take Notice of it; whence Pliny informs the Emperour Trajan, That the Christians, in his Time, us'd to meet together, among other Things, to sing Hymns before it was Light to Christ as God. And the Author of Philostratus, among Lucians Works, and as antient as he, reflects upon the Chri-

Christians, as watching all Night to sing their Sacred Hymns or Psalms: And Ammianus Marcellinus, one of Julian the Apostate's Military Officers, gives the same Account of them afterward. So that if the Matter of Fatt could yet be doubted of, the Testimonies of Justin Martyr in that miscall'd his Second Apology, in his Epistle to Zenas, and in the Beginning of his Conference with Trypho the few; of Clemens of Alexandria, Origen, Tertullian, Cyprian, Minutius Felix, Arnobius, and others, would put an End to the Dispute, and are too many for me at present to take Notice of. We may then be fatisfy'd, that Psalmody was a constant Part of their Publick Service in the primitive Christian Church. As for its private Use, we find Paul and Silas finging Pfalms in Prison, and that so powerfully, as to break open the Prison Doors, to loose their Fetters, and to bring their before unmerciful Gaoler to Faith and Repentance. St. Paul exhorts his Ephesians, Eph. V. 19. to speak to, or among one another, in Psalms, and Hymns, and spiritual Songs, singing and making Melody in their Hearts to the Lord. - So again he persuades the Colossians, Col. III. 16. That the Word of God might dwell in them richly, with all Wisdom; and that they should teach and admonish one another in Psalms, and Hymns, and spiritual Songs, singing with Grace to God in their Hearts. And St. James, Jam. III. 15. advises in short, If any be merry, let him sing Psalms. Thus, to speak with the Author of the Wisdom of Salomon, Wisd. XVIII. 9. in Times of Danger, - The righteous Children of good Men did sacrifice secretly; and with one Consent made a holy Law, That the Saints should be alike Partakers of Good and Evil, the Fathers now singing out their Songs of Praise.

But here, because some sullen way-ward Persons, who yet call themselves Christians, are mighty Enemies to the Use of Instrumental Musick in Churches, we may briefly enquire, Whether the Use of such Musick be Lawful, or of any considerable Antiquity in the Christian Church, or not? That it was always agreeable to God's Will in the Patriarchal and Mosaick Age, and therefore Good in it felf, I have demonstrated already. How it should come to lose its Nature under the Gospel, will be very hard for any Man living to shew. The Spirits of sinning Christians, as such, might be as despondent as theirs before them; their Sorrows, and their Joys and Gratitude might be as fignal; why then should it be offensive to make use of the same Means to express their Thankfulness, to allay their Sorrows, or to cheer their Spirits in the Worship of God, as Saints and pious Men of old did? If singing Praises to God with tunable Voices, be heavenly Musick, as indeed it is, will the Addition of Instruments to Voices any way pall the Harmony? Do Organs, well play'd on, make the Musick of the worshipping Congregation the more disagreeable? We'll grant that, during the Times of Persecution, the Church might be content with vocal Musick only, as less invidious, and 12ss design'd for Pomp and Grandeur; they would only have expos'd themselves as a Prey to their Enemies by fuch expensive Consorts: But when those Storms were once blown over, it was not fit the Christian Church, in a flourishing and peaceful State, should be more Melancholick, or any Way inferiour to the Temple, or the Synagogue: That David's Psalms were sung in the Church, is sufficiently proved; but if a Pfalm be well defined by Gregory Nyffen; a Regulation

(23) gulation of the Voice by a musical Instrument; or by St. Basil, a musical Way of speaking to an Organ well play'd on, according to the Rules of Harmony; though we take a Pfalm there in a general Sense, yet that will take in the Ecclesiastical too, and will, without ascribing the Invention to any Bishop of Rome, prove that Instrumental Musick entered very early into the Church. And though, as the Author of the Quefions to the Orthodox among Justin Quest. 107. Martyr's Works, infinuates; Flain Song, without Instruments, was used in the Church of old, because of the Unskilfulness of many Christians in Psalmody; yet that Art arising to greater Perfection afterward, that Reason ceasing, the Practice gradually came to an End too in the greater Churches; where, that Psalmody might be carry'd on without Discord or Indecency, Singers were made one of the inferiour Orders in the Church, and not incapable, as fuch, of rising to a higher Degree. Vid. Bingham's Antiquities of the Christ. Ch. l. 3. c. 7. Bona Cardin. de Psalmod.

The Church of Rome has found its Account in keeping up this Order still; and the Charms of their Vocal and Instrumental Musick in their Churches are so bewitching, that, for their sakes, Men of Apprehensions otherwise sharp enough, can overlook all their other monstrous Errors. How that Order came to be laid aside in many of the Resorm'd Churches, since their Resormation was carry'd on in most Places in a very tumultuous and disorderly Manner, we need not wonder. But in this Nation, where Matters were managed with more Calmness, and by better Authority, most of our Cathedral and Collegiate Churches had their Divine Service, their Pfalms in Prose, and their Anthems sung still by their Canons, petit Canons, and other Lay-Choristers, both Men and Boys, the Bishops, Deans, and Prebendaries, if able, joining with them; where, when they are well order'd by their Superiours, Men of sincere Piety and elevated Devotion may have their very Souls ravish'd with that celestial Harmony they meet with there. And however deficient some Foreign Churches may he in this particular, yet it must be confess'd to their Honour, that both the High and Low Dutch, and French, have taken more Care of their ordinary Psalmody than we have done. Among them you may hear crouded Congregations singing really with all their Might, and singing skilfully too with a loud Noise, without one discordant Voice in the whole Confort. Among them we may hear little Children in their Schools, whither they are fent very early, fuch as can scarce speak plain, yet finging Psalms under the Direction of their School-Mistress; and well-grown Lads under that of their School-Masters; by which they are all fitted to fing Pfalms to their Organs, on Sundays especially, with so agreeable an Harmony, as cannot but take much with those, who come thither with a Design to do Honour to their Ma-And I have been inform'd, that in most of our Free-Schools there were Salaries originally fettled, not only for Writing and Grammar Masters, but for Masters of Musick too, to instruct young Scholars in the Art of Singing; by which they learnt to speak well, with an agreeable Accent, and

and a good Command of their Voices, and to plead handsomely at the Bar, and to speak with a good Grace and a due Pathos from the Pulpit, when they happen'd to be call'd to those Employments in their maturer Years; and they were by that Care, well prepar'd to sing his Praises, whose Providence had allotted them so happy an Education, in the publick Assemblies of the Church. And I find Queen Elizabeth, in her Injunctions, taking Notice that,

The Alienation of which Livings, she then piously endeavour'd to prevent; and perhaps if due Enquiry were made after Lands given in this Kingdom, to such truly Charitable Uses, many sacrilegious Embezlements might be discovered, and the Revenues happily returned to their original Purposes.

Pfalmody, and that in Parish-Churches especially, has been by some very Learned Men, but for very insufficient Reasons, much discouraged among us; and when all Manner of Musick beside has been so much improved, when our Cathedrals, and Royal, and College-Chappels have been wonderfully advanced both in Vocal and Instrumental Harmony, Parochial Musick has been so slighted in many Places, that the Clerks could scarce pretend to sing to the Praise and Glory of God, when so very sew were able, or willing, to join in Consort with them. Some travelling Teachers indeed of late Years have brought young Men in some Country Parishes to sing tolerably.

lerably. The Pfalm-Tunes, though antient, are not so contemptible Pieces of Musick, as some would represent them; but our Gentlemen and great Men are generally above such humble Difpensations, and the Musick of the Theatre is more grateful to their Ears, where all the looser Passions are indulged, than that of an Assembly of Christian People, in grave Tunes praising the Lord for his Goodne's, and declaring the Wonders he does for the Children of Men; and many are willing to gratify an Eunuch finging in an Opera, in a much more liberal Manner than a Teacher of Psalmody, (though they too meet with noble Encouragement from such whose Hearts God has touch'd) for instructing Children, otherwise lost in Ignorance and Vice, in the Principles of Religion, Psalmody, and other necessary Learning. And, instead of helping to mend our Parish-Musick, such Gentlemen are apt to please themfelves with the Blunders of the Performers, and to despise and laugh at the whole Ordinance for their Mistakes. Yet certainly, if the Musick of the Church be compared with that of the Theatre, the Advantage must lie wholly on the Side of the former. No Heart can be so warm'd with sacred Enthusiasm by any Solo or Sonata, as by a pious Hymn or Anthem well compos'd, and well perform'd, or by a plain Psalm skilfully fung, with clear and tunable Voices, in a grand Confort in the House of God. The Musick of those light and airy Sonnets may tickle the Ear Men a with Pleasure for a while; the sober Harmony ify tl of a Psalm or Anthem affects the Soul, makes heir } lasting Impressions upon the Mind, and inspires o doi the generous Breast with truly great and glorineir g ous Thoughts, enflames the Spirits for the nobleft Undertakings, such as are the Works of stran Love

Love, Mercy, Justice, Charity, and every Thing which tends to God's Honour, and his Country and his Neighbour's Welfare. This kind of Harmony would lay the bluftring Humours of the cowardly Hector, the malicious Anger of the Man of pretended Honour, the fiery Temper of the seditious Malecontent, the brutish Inclinations of the Slaves of Lust; and pious Words fet to a lively and majestick Tune, with the Concert of good Voices and Instruments, would give the witty Atheist an Idea of something so truly Divine, as would melt down his otherwife stubborn Heart, into the Acknowledgment of a Deity. But to expatiate in Commendation of that which makes the very Fiends of Hell submit; to lay together the Testimonies of holy Men of old, concerning the Force and Influence of Psalmody, would be endless as well as needless. It's that without which the publick Worship of God can never be compleat; which nothing but Extremity of Persecution can sience; and the want of which, in such Circumtances, all the faithful People of God must leartily deplore. It's the Food of humble and levout Souls, the Joy of Angels, the Foretast of Heaven, and the Delight of that God, who s worthy to be prais'd, and accepts of Praises s an Acknowledgment of that Honour due to is holy Name.

lend their helping Hand to raise the Poor, the Destitute, the Orphan, the whole perishing Tribe, from the Dunghil, and tune their pleafant youthful Voices to Gratitude to God above, and to their Benefactors here below! How acceptable must fo pious a Profusion be, which spends it felf to refcue, otherwise helpless Souls, from Hell, and to bring them Home to that Son of God, who laid down his own precious Life to redeem the Souls of the Poor, and such as are cast out, as well as those of the Rich and Great, from the Pains of eternal Death! If it were a good Evidence of the bleffed Jesus's being the long expected Messias, that by and through him the Gospel was preach'd to the Poor, it will be an infallible Evidence, that those are the sincere Servants of God, and such whose Worship he delights in, through whose generous Assistance, the Mouths of the Poor are fill'd with the Praises of God, and the facred Choir fill'd up with fuch as otherwife might have howl'd in eternal Torments. this Christian Care, we hope, through God's Bleffing, for a more effectual Reformation of Manners, than any other Method has yet produced. We hope to fee God's Worship perform'd more exactly every Day, Psalmody, even in Country Churches, gradually advanced to the highest Pertection, till all Persons of Wealth grow asham'd of not putting their helping Hands to the Christian Education of the Poor and Ignorant; till Men of the highest Quality be asham'd to sit is lent, when all the Congregation, of which they are Members, are, with a loud Voice and earnest Devotion, singing Praises to their Maker till all the meaner fort of Christians shall unant ftors, moully tune their Voices to his Honour; and till Ignora our happily Reformed British Church appear in the Presence of her Eternal Head, with all the glorious Ornaments of the King of Heaven, and be yet more glorious within, and be in every Respect, fair as the Moon, bright as the Sun, and yet, to all her Enemies, terrible as an Army with Banners.

And nothing can tend to this desirable End more effectually, at present, than a just Encouragement of those Officers, whose Business it is to lead the Pfalm in our Parish-Churches. What the Quire are in our Cathedrals, that they are in our Parochial Churches. The Order of the Singers in the primitive Church were the Original of these, as well as of the others; the Name of Clerk fignifies their Relation to the Clergy Still, tho' they are not still formally ordained; and that of Parish Clerk determines the Places in which they are to exercise their Faculty; and these, as the others had been in the Primitive Church, were first instituted to regulate and encourage Psalmody, in the publick Assemblies of the Reformation: and these too, upon their apparent Fitness, may be admitted, on Occasion, to the Office and Order of Deacon or Priest, as of old: Their Business in our Church is to attend on the Bishop, Priest, or Deacon, in the Performance of fuch Offices as belong to their feveral Orders; to take Care of such Books as are in Use in the Church; to assist at making Collections on publick Occasions, especially on Sacrament-Days; to have the Vestments of the officiating Clergy, and the Utenfils of the Vestiary and the Holy Table always in Readiness; to give Notice to the Parish Priest or Curate of the Sick, or such as desire any private Converse with their Pafors, for Satisfaction in Matters of Doubt or Ignorance, and for leading the whole Congregation

As for the Incorporation of them into a Company, it's purely a Civil Privilege; it adds nothing to their Character nor alters the Nature of their Employment, tho some spiritual Advantages may be made from

You are, as the Singers were of old, both under the Law and the Gospel, to be humble, prudent, tractable, diligent in your Places, and to be devout, pious, innocent, and exemplary in your Lives and Conversations. I have known some of those disaffected to our Church, and some who sit very loofe to all Religion, contend with their Prieft, in hopes to thrust a lewd uncapable Wretch into the Desk, and so to ease the Parish of a Charge, at the Price of affronting God and his Ministers, and throwing Dirt upon all the Duties of Religion. You are to attend upon the officiating Clergy in all God's solemn publick Ordinances, and Men of Sense will conclude, that you ought always to be upon your Guard, to be habitually lober, and ready to sing to God with Grace in your Hearts, and to be always fit to communicate at God's holy Table: Your Body is still a Part of the Clergy, and your ill Behaviour will bring a Scandal upon the Church, as well as that of your Superiours: And as our Ecclesiastical Laws punish the Vices of the Clergy, when flagrant, by Sufpension, Excommunication, and Deprivation, as Occasion requires; so you, as an Incorporation, ought to admit none to be Members of your Body, whose Lives and Disabilities make them a Difgrace to you, and to cast them out, if they tall into gross Errors and Misdemeanours; that such as are unfit for those of the Church, may have no Interest in your Civil Privileges.

The Church has apointed Ffalms for every Day of every Month, by following her Choice you can never be guilty of any great Abfurdity; but leaving out, or putting in, or skipping from Verse to Verse, on Pretence of making the Psalm more pertinent to the Occasion; by which Means the Congregation are at a Loss to find out what they are to sing; or the Inconvenience must be prevented by that unharmonious and undecent way of Reading every Line before it is sung, by which Means the Remedy becomes as bad as the Disease. To do this, or to be wifer than the Church in her Appointments, belongs neither to you, nor to the Parish Priest, but only to the Governours of the Church, and her Representatives conven'd lawfully in a National Synod.

The Choice of Psalms on particular Days, if needful, belongs to the Incumbent: If he leaves it to your Discretion, a modest Discretion would yet consult him, who, as he's the proper Judge of what is sittest to preach; so he's the proper Judge of what is sittest to sing, for the Ediscati-

The Measures in which the Jewish and Christian Churches sung their Psalms, were not like ours, though the Hebrew Original be sometimes Rhythme, but their Numbers little understood: Our vulgar Profe comes nearest to them, and the noblest Anthems are drawn from thence. fince such Psalmody is above the Attainments of our ordinary Congregations, all the Reform'd Churches sing their Psalms and Hymns in Rhythme, that rendring them more pleasant to the Ear, more easy to the Memory, and allowing them more of Breath at the End of just so many Syllables, than the profaick Compositions usually The Reform'd Churches have always been very shy of Alterations, for fear of disturbing the Minds of well-meaning, but perhaps not overcritical, Christians: Our Church has long used the same Way; and as I am satisfied, that Men may sing Psalms in Rhythme with as quiet and peaceable Minds, as they can fing or say those in Prose, whatever a Learned our Church did amiss, when she retain'd the old Profe Version in her Daily Service, notwithstanding the Accuracy of the last Translation in the Body of our Bibles: That old Translation has been unanswerably vindicated by the Learned Dr. Hammond, and others; and our best Composers of Church Musick have so generally chosen that old Translation for their Hymns and Anthems, that I cannot, on that Reason, but have a great Regard to our old Rhythming Version of the Pfalms; and must, in my own Judgment, conclude all Innovations dangerous, till such Time as a National Synod shall lay one more correct before the Three Estates in Parliament; which having the Royal Sanction added to it, would really oblige all the good Members of the Church of England, and be receiv'd, and made use of every where with Thankfulness.

You, my Brethren, are Masters of our Parochial Musick, especially where an Organ is wanting: And it's your Business and Interest not to confound, but to promote Harmony, and that doubtless is the Aim of every worthy Member of your Society: But to read every Line by one alone, confounds all; it breaks the Sense of every Period; it breaks the Sweetness of every Cadence; it's a Practice therefore admitted of in no well-order'd Church, that of North-Britain only excepted, and it was brought first into England by them in the Head of those Rebellious Arms, which they rais'd against the best of Churches, and the best of Kings. And certainly it's now Time to be ashamed of such an immusical Contrivance. If this undecent Practice were entirely banish'd, all such as could read, and desir'd to sing, would bring their Books with them; such as could not, would endeavour to get them by Heart: The primitive Christians had them all so; very many in the Foreign Reform'd Churches have been as industrious, and so would great Numbers of our own, if that absurd Custom did not indulge their Laziness.

As you are a Corporation, beside your Power to cast out unworthy Members, you have excellent Opportunities, at your weekly Meetings, to improve your felves in your Bufiness; and you may fettle fuch Measures among your selves, if you are but true to your own Interests, as may advance Psalmody, in and about this City, to a yet greater Perfection: You'll advance it especially by performing it in your own Persons, reverently, devoutly, earnestly, as if you your felves believ'd Psalmody to be a Divine Ordinance. The Behaviour of the Masters of the Musick, and of the Masters of the Assemblies, has usually a good Influence upon the whole Confort. I have often wonder'd to see many of our Clergy so very careless in the Matter; It may be many have not confider'd the Matter, and so have indulged themselves in sitting at the singing, tho' they have food up at the reading Psalms; for what Reasons, they themselves know best: I am fure they'll find it difficult to shew me either the Priests or Levites under the Law, or the Bishops, Priests, or Deacors, or Singers, under the Gospel, suting while they fung the Praises of their God; or any devout or humble Christian, sitting at an An-Thole thom, in our Royal Chappels or Cathedrals. who who reverence one Ordinance, will behave themfelves reverently at all; and Irreverence at one, may have a fatal Influence on Men in all the rest. Singing to God is one part of the Beauty of Holiness; but it's miserably tarnish'd by an indecent Behaviour in his own House.

Finally, Let not any of that Skill in Musick, which God has bless'd any of you with, be ever defiled by mingling with what's profane and irreligious. You too are God's Ministers, and tho' it may be of feveral Professions, yet all peculiarly devoted to his Service; Let therefore nothing that is fcandalous or offensive to chaft or modest Ears, ever proceed out of your Mouths: What Communication has Light with Darkness? What Communion has God with Belial? Thus the Levites, thus the Singers were taught of old. Let but these Advices prevail with you, and then you and I, and all the whole Israel of God, when we come in due Time to be translated to the Church triumphant, to the Assembly of the First-Born, we shall there with Angels and Arch-Angels, and all holy glorified Souls, fing eternal Hallelujahs to the Head of the Church, the Son of God, our Saviour and Redeemer.

To Whom, with Thee O Father, and Thee O Holy Ghost, Three Persons, but One Infinite and Eternal G O D, be given, as is most due, all Honour, Glory, Praise, Power, Might, Majety, and Dominion, now, henceforth, and for evermore. Amen. Amen.
